life. The whole desulfator thing hasn't really been embraced by the battery industry. If an abused (deeply discharged) battery is capable of being recovered, then there are high-potential, charge- discharge routines that can be conducted on equipment that immediately measures and then confirms airworthiness . . . or says "trash it".

After "discussing" this with the inspector and doing my homework and calling EAA headquarters and AIR20 0 in DC, which is where the previous quote came from, the inspector was gracious enough to accept that he was wrong. With the elimination of the 300/600 mile proficiency area restriction from OL's, this problem should not occur again.

A(continued): IF you have a problem, however - having the option to do so is nice. Suppose you had a OV condition that trips the alternator offline and you are IMC or VFR-on-top and your battery is draining pretty bad before you can get down - I'll take a possible OV condition in that scenario over dead screens, and reengage the alternator field.
